The Legislation Which Followed the Civil War is Now Unnecessary Election Su. pervisors and Deputy Marshals.

When the Fifty-third Congress meets in special seedon in August it have the power which no previous Congress assembling in twenty years has had to wipe out at once and for all future (ine the last vestiges of military legislation embodied in the Federal election laws of 1871. Order had not been thoroughly restored in the South, the supremacy of the civil power had not been firmly re-established, the results of the bitter conflict had not results of the bitter conflict had not been fully acknotedged and acquiesced in, when a Republican Congress passed on February 28, 1871, the original and still enduring Federal interference law. It provided that in cities having up-ward of twenty thousand inhabitants, when, prior to a registration of voters when, prior to a registration of voters or an election for representative in Congress, two citizens shall make known in writing their desire to have the same scrutinized or guarded, it is the duty of the judge of the United States Circuit Court to open court not less than ten days before registration, and appoint for each voting district two citizens of different political parties as supervisors of election, These supervisors zens of different political parties as su-pervisors of election. These supervisors of elections have the right to challenge persons offering to register, to inspect and scrutinize the registry, and for purposes of identification to affix their signatures to the same, to attend the polls and the counting of the ballots, to challenge per-sons offering to vote, and to scrutinize, to count, and canvass the ballots cast in their respective districts. The United their respective districts. The United States Marshal of the district, upon writ-their respective the district, upon writstates Marshal of the district, upon written application of two citizens, must appoint special dejuty marshals, to aid and protect the supervisors, Persons obetructing these officials are punishable by imprisonment for two years or less, and a fine of $2,000 or less.

The object of this legislation was to provide against and prevent, in certain voting districts in the Southern States, the hostilities which characterized ordinary elections. The abrupt bestewal of suffrage upon thousands of colored yoters in the South brought with it a long train of evils, and in many districts the white voters, who had but recently laid down their arms as soldiers in orlaid down their arms as soldiers in or ganized regiments, took them up again as volunteer regulators of the suffrage in their respective localities. Federal aid was invoked by local Republicar ceholders, whose retention was de pendent upon their activity with the colored population, and the good results which they could show from it, by the return of Republican congressmen from Southern constituencies. Along with other repressive laws, most of them impracticable, and many of them odiously unjust, this bill to interfere with State elections was enacted, and the justification for it was found in that clause of the Constitution which (article lo, section 2) empowered Congress to enforce by appropriate tegislation the right of all citizens to vote, without discrimiforce by appropriate registation the right of all citizens to vote, without discrimi-nation on account of race, color, or pre-vious condition of servitude. These measures were known at the time as

"Ku Klux" legislation.
The most important features of this features authorities to invade the domain of the State Governments in the control of elections congressmen, and in the alternate years, when no congressmen are to be voted for and State officers only are to be clected, it is inoperative. There are few doubtful districts in the South nowa-days, and in most Northern districts party lines are too tightly drawn to be party line across the presence of these Federal officials. Again, their appointment carries with it a certain amount of desirable patronage, which according to the terms of the law, must be equally divided between the two parties. Congressmen from districts containing cities were reluctant to vote for the total abolition of a system which gave employment to many of their constituents. Congressmen from districts containing no large cities were indifferent about the matter, because it did not affect them or their neighbors, and could, therefore, do no harm to their re-elecnffect them or their neighbors, and could, therefore, do no harm to their re-election. The big Democratic cities of the North, like New York, Brooklyn, St. Louis, Detroit, Louisville, and San Francisco, suffered most from this Federal interference. The Democrats in the big Republican cities, like Philadelphia, Fittsburg, Cincinnati and Cleveland, suffered a good deal from it, too.

But the Federal election have might have been on the statute books a long time to come but for the singular inopporune and reactionary movement that the tepublican leaders in Congress under-sek in order to extend its operations, in 899, by the adoption of an aggravated and wholly indefensible addition to this innecessary law, popularly called the "Force bill." This aroused into antagonism all the opponents of such Federal interference, std, as is often the case in the field of politics, the attempt to exabout the very condition of things required for its overthrow. The Demo crats in the Chicago convention took up opposition to the Force bill as the first plank of their platform. They unhesitatingly denounced it, and pledged themselves, and their candidates, to its defeat and the repeal of any similar measure. The Republicans, unable to justify, and fearful of excusing, the radical course of many of the extremists in Congress, had little to say about the Force bill during the presidential cambaign, but Democratic overlars and writers. eaign, but Democratic orators and writers acquainted the voters with its iniquies, and the futility and injustice of all such laws. As a necessary consequence of this, the popular demand became general for the repeal of the law of 1871, but, contrary to general expectation, the complications between the Republicans and the Populists in the Western and Northwestern States have thrown the Senate into the hands of the Democrats, result which did not seem probable, and scarcely possible, a year ago.

and scarcely possible, a year ago.

The Democracy having, therefore, control of both branches of Congress, as well as the presidency, will be able at the August special session to wipe out, abrogate and do away with forever the obsolete plan of stationing special supervisors and marshals at the polls on election day to harass, perplex and intimidate voters who have already sufficient to do in complying with the electoral regulations prescribed by their respective States. So we are not likely again to see any of little Johnny Davenport's hirelings in or about the polls of New York, except in the capacity of private individuals.

And this will not be the leave of the control of the capacity of private individuals.

And this will not be the least gain to the cause of popular government from the election of November, 1892.—New York Sun.

The Afro-American citizens of Rich-mond celebrated the anniversary of the Declaration of Independence in an en husiastic manner yesterday at the Exhappiness and perspiration, and they went about enjoying themselves with an energy which, if employed in their bustenergy which, if employed in their ous-ness pursuits, would soon amass them a comfortable independence. The first event was a game of hall between two picked nines. The game was played with more or less science and afforded much estisfaction to the spectators. The next thing which caught the attention of the race brought up the rear of the sports. The proceedings were interspersed with pleasing music by the First Battallon Band. The principal event of the day was an exhibition drill by Company "A." The men show good practice, and performed their evolutions in a creditable manner. The entire colored population of Richmond seemed to be present. Good order was maintained on the grounds no other dissipation being indulged in besides the consumption of an immense quantity of lemonade and sandwiches. quantity of lemonade and sandwiches.

NEWPORT NEWS, VA., July 4.—Spe-cial.—The trial of Walter Slater, the desperado, who was captured in Richmond me time ago and turned over to U authorities in this city, came up in the county court yesterday. There were two county court yesterday. There were two indictments against him—one for breaking into the saloon of Rill Wheeler and demolishing its contents, and the other for attempting to shoot Wiliam Turner about two months ago. The jury failed to agree on the first offense, and Commonwealth's Attorney Robinson, thinking he would have no trouble in fastening guilt months prisoner on the more serious upon the prisoner on the more serious charge of attempted shooting, made a motion to have the indictment nolle prose-

When Slater was called to answer the charges in the second indictment, it was found that a most grievous mistake had been made. The entire argument of the prisoner's counsel was based upon a technical defect in the indictment, and Judge Peck, after considering the point in question, quashed the document. Sla-ter was released, but Commonwealth's Attorney Robinson had him arrested again, and he will be reindicted.
